So what about everything else covered in the Standard like counters and operable hardware and drinking fountains?
ADA

The Department of Justice's regulation for new construction and alterations reads:

§ 36.405 Alterations: Historic preservation.

(a) Alterations to buildings or facilities that are eligible for listing in the National Register of Historic Places under the National Historic Preservation Act (16 U.S.C. 470 et seq) or are designated as historic under State or local law, shall comply to the maximum extent feasible with this part.

(b) If it is determined that it is not feasible to provide physical access to an historic property that is a place of public accommodation in a manner that will not threaten or destroy the historic significance of the building or the facility, alternative methods of access shall be provided pursuant to the requirements of subpart C of this part.
ABA

Federal agencies must apply for a waiver or a modification of the Standard for those elements not specified in the exception.

One of my favorite TA questions:

“I have a historic foundation. The original house that sat on it burned down. If I reconstruct an exact replica of the original building, can I use the exceptions for historic buildings?”

Answer

NO

That would be considered new construction. The exemptions would only apply to the foundation alone.
